Dear Harold,

I heard from Gary today that you feel I have not sent you money which I said I would. I know, of course, that I said I would pay for the Xeroxing. I had expected that you would send me a note asking for the amount. In this I was insensitive and regret not having paid you as soon as I knew what the cost of the xeroxing was.

On the other hand, Gary reports that you feel my overall contribution to your work has been of a somewhat negligable amount. In going through my checkbook I find that I wrote checks for $100 on Jan 8, $100 on Feb 3, and $200 on Aug 28. All of these were cashed. I felt that this covered the materials you were obtaining and would leave some over for other costs you might incur.

Enclosed is a check for $100 to cover the cost of xeroxing and hopefully provide you with roughly $40 remaining to cover other costs you may have. Should you feel my contribution to date is inadequate, please let me know.

Best regards,

Ned

P.S. more later, but I want to get this off now.
